A Must for All Law Enforcement Officers

Canine Encounters Law Enforcement Training first presented Defensive Tactics: Canine Encounters in 2005. Since then this training has grown to be one of the most professional training courses across the United States for all Law Enforcement Officers who encounter dogs on the job. This class is designed for police officers and is intended to offer officers who encounter dogs on their jobs a better perspective on how to deal with these encounters. In this training officers will leave with an improved understanding on what to do when they encounter a dog and to defend against an attacking dog, OC spray effects, Taser use on dogs and proper baton use on a dog if needed. Officers across the United States have longed to take interest in their canine encounters using less-lethal techniques, so to protect the officer and the dog on the street, officers will learn how to skillfully use the knowledge they learn in this training course and how they can apply it on the job.

Course Objectives:

Defensive Tactics: Canine Encounters is updated continuously and can be attended by any officers who work in a law enforcement agency.
