Course Objectives:

Sexual deviant behavior is “need” driven behavior. Sex offenders repeat their crimes because of this “need”. Therefore, there exists a high probability of additional victims. Officers investigating and interviewing persons committing sex crimes, including sexual homicides, must understand the nature of this “need” driven behavior in order to properly investigate and hold these sex offenders criminally responsible. The core objective of this course is not to gain insight or understanding about why sex offenders act out against victims to help or treat them, but to recognize and assess how sex offenders act out against the victims to identify, arrest, and convict them.
